

Ready for volunteer Search & Rescue? Check. Prepped for emergency triage & First Aid? Check. This “victim” is a killer & I’m his new target? Um... Can we go over that training powerpoint ONE more time? No good deed goes unpunished... Heather Harmons trained and ready to handle just about anything as a local Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) volunteer. She can assess you for shock, tell you the safest place to go after a hazardous explosion, or cut off a leaking gas supply, but the rescue course curriculum didn't include asking the victims she helps if they've used a natural disaster as cover for a brutal slaying, or if the tool she borrows to save a police officer also happens to be the murder weapon... Acquiring a cop boyfriend should come in handy when someones out to kill you, but the last thing Heather needs is to fall for one who has good reason to suspect she's a killer. Sgt. Isaac Porter lost his first love years ago, and blew a second chance by being too wrapped up in his past. Hes only too happy to make Heather 's acquaintance as she answers his distress signal & hauls what's left of his tin can of a boat from hurricane-ravaged waters. Heather is the answer to Ike's prayers, & a future with her is high on his priority list, if he can just make sure she HAS one. But a murderer stalks ever closer to Heather and while sticking close to protect her is pure pleasure, the pain of the mounting evidence against her jeopardizes both Ike's career & his heart and tests his loyalties. If he can't sort out who to trust in time, history's going to repeat itself, & Ike's going to lose yet another love, with one heart-wrenching difference: This time, he'll know he had the power to save her...
