

The Carasoy

You must fetch me a bottle of Carasoy, says she, haughtily. And what is that? asks the boy Colin, pleased that he has won the favor of the Queen of the Fairies, even if by accident. Why, its the kind of wine that makes people happy! The lonely Colin has grown up by his own wits -- and they have served him well so far! But this Queen is out to fool the boy . . . and can even the best human wits suffice in such a contest? George MacDonald (1824-1905), famous for his tales of his beloved Scottish homeland, also wrote fantasies full of both the delights and dreadful dangers to be found in the Land of Faerie.
